The Race for the 28th Congressional District Seat

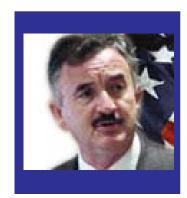

Henry Cuellar

The congressional race in the 28th District in South Texas, is without a doubt one of the hottest in the state. Two years ago, Henry Cuellar, once a friend and supporter of Ciro Rodriguez, decided to challenge Rodriguez for the job, and challenge he did.

Catching the Rodriguez team asleep at the wheel, Henry Cuellar, a former Texas State Representative and Texas Secretary of State, pulled an upset victory beating Rodriguez by 203 votes. This was out of a total of 49,099 votes cast.

Of course there were recounts, lawsuits and more lawsuits, but in the end Cuellar held on and is now completing his first term as a United States Congressman.

Rodriguez, who complained bitterly about the outcome went on to form a governmental relations firm called Rio Strategy Group LLC. Now recharged, Rodriguez has jumped back into the race for his old seat.

And joining both Cuellar and Rodriguez in the 2006 Democratic Primary is non other than Victor Manuel Morales.

Victor Morales

Morales, who ran for the US Senate in 1996 in the Democratic Primary, was the guy in the little white pick up truck who beat three formidable contenders in a statewide race with very little money. ¿YPor Que No?.. and why not? was Victor, the school teacher's, favorite question at every campaign stop.

The voters found him refreshing and sincere. The Democratic Party reluctantly supported him but felt all along that he hadn't paid his dues. After being invited to address the

Eliza May Kicks Off Campaign for City Council

Eliza May kicked off her campaing for Austin City Council on February 16th, 2006 at the Juan in a Million Restaurant on Cesar Chavez Street in Austin, Texas.

May, who has served for the past five years as the President of the Greater Ausin Hispanic Chamber of Commerce stated, "Our city's economic, cultural and ethnic diversity will be a major strength as we move forward in this century." The 30 year resident of Austin said she wants to work to make Austin a "city of opportunity."

May is originally from Laredo, Texas and came to central Texas to attend Texas State University in San Marcos where she earned a bachelors degree in 1976. After working in state government for a number of years she went back to school and graduated from The University of Texas at Austin School of Social Work in 1984.

Davila Named President of Board of Houston ISD

Long time community activist Diana Davila has been named President of the Board of Education of the Houston Independent School District. This is the largest school district in the state of Texas.

Davila, 33, was one of the original members of the Hispanic Education Committee in 1994 that questioned the appointment of Dr. Rod Paige as superintendent of HISD. Paige later went on to become the Secretary of Education

Davila, along with her husband, Abel, who serves on the Board of Trustees of the Houston Community College System (HCCS). are the parents of two young children and became involved in the community at a very young age. Davila earned her bachelors degree from the University of Houston and a masters degree in educational management from UofH CL.

Sarita E. Brown, new President of Excelencia in Education

Sarita E. Brown, President, Excelencia in Education, has spent more than two decades at prominent national academic and educational institutions and at the highest levels of government working to develop more effective strategies to raise academic achievement and opportunity for low-income and minority students.

From the start of her career at the University of Texas at Austin, where she created a national model promoting minority success in graduate education, to her current post as founding President of Excelencia in Education in Washington, DC, Ms. Brown has focused her work on expanding this country's human capital through improving the quality of higher education.

She holds a bachelor's of arts in ethnic studies and a bachelor's of science and master's of arts in communication from The University of Texas at Austin.

Felix Alvarado Disqualified from Governors Race

Felix Alvarado is a middle school administrator from the Fort Worth area who decided to run for Governor of Texas. He writes a check for his filing fee in the amount of $3,750. He gets a website up and running and begins to discuss ideas and goals. He starts to travel around the state of Texas to promote his candidacy. Then lo and behold, the Texas Democratic Party discovers that the check he wrote the party is worthless.

What does Felix Alvarado do? When contacted by the media he says, "I take full responsibility for that. That's mea culpa. I overplayed my hand. I am disappointed"

Alvarado, still has his website up as of this writing, now asks that we considering supporting his sister who is running for Lt. Governor of Texas.

On Becoming a First Class Citizen

As the March 7th 2006, Primaries approach it is instructive that we stop and consider the different types of "operational citizenship" that Americans seem to practice.

First Class Citizenship

This type of citizenship is practiced when individuals who are eligible to vote do in fact go out and vote. While this may sound simple, it appears to be an increasing problem for the world's preimer democracy.

In Texas, in the last presidential election (2004), only 56% of registered voters bothered to turn out (7,359,621 out of 13,098,329). When people who are citizens, go out and register to vote and then on election day do in fact turn out to vote, they are what we call "first class citizens."

Second Class Citizenship

Individuals who practice second class citizenship are registered to vote but do not bother to turn out and vote. The voting rolls are filled with individuals who practice operational citizenship in this fashion.

Third Class Citizenship

This type of citizenship is characteristic of individuals who are citizens but not registered to vote. When you are not registered to vote, you cannot vote. And in the words of the late Willie Velasquez, founder of the Southwest Voter Education and Registration Project, "Su Voto es Su Voz." But if you are not registered to vote, pues como quien dice, usted no tiene voz.

Cambiando de Temas

It has always been interesting to me to observe that millions of Mexicans manage to find their way into the United States of America every year. Most come because of necesity. Most come because their choices have come down to starving to death on a ranchito some where in Zacatecas, or taking your chances in a place like Austin, Texas, the land of sun and money. (Sometimes more sun than money)

While it is not a difficult choice it is indeed a painful one. For it means leaving behind loved ones. It means constant worry about their safety and well being. And it means having to let the days pass without watching your kids grow up. On more than one ocassion I have heard these recent arrivals comment on how much we have here in America and yet how much we don't appreciate it.

On the question of voting, I had a man tell me a few years ago, "No, si yo tuviera la ciudanania, you saldria a votar cada vez que me tocaba. Yo veo que hay muchos de ustedes que no cuidan lo que tienen aquí en este país." (No, if I was a citizen, I would go out and vote every time I could. I see that a lot of you are not taking care of what you have in this country.)

When I think about this man's comments, I think about all the second and third class citizens we have here in Austin, Texas and in other places around the country.

The Story

Three Burials is languid simplicity at its best. The story starts off as a murder mystery of sorts when a Mexican man, Melquiades Estrada, is found shot dead outside a dusty Texas town, near the U.S./Mexican border. Without any family, he's written off and unceremoniously buried in a shallow grave. This is not at all satisfactory for Pete Perkins (Jones), a local ranch foreman and Melquiades' only friend. Pete decides to investigate his friend's murder on his own and finds out the culprit is a young hot-headed border patrolman named Mike Norton (Barry Pepper). He kidnaps Mike and forces him to disinter the body. With his captive in tow and the body tied to a mule, Pete then undertakes a dangerous and romantic journey into Mexico to give Melquiades a proper burial.

Hispanics and Texas Politics

Did You Know?

Since Republicans became the statewide majority in 1994, 8 minority Texans have held statewide office; yet in the 122 years that Democrats controlled the State (1872-1994), only 4 minority Texans held statewide office.

It took Democrats 114 years to elect a single Hispanic to statewide office. The Democrat establishment later tried to defeat him because he was too conservative.

Under Republican leadership, 5 Republican Hispanics have held statewide office. Currently, Victor Carrillo serves as Chairman of Texas' powerful Railroad Commission, and Justice David Medina serves on the Texas Supreme Court. Others who have moved into even higher positions include Al Gonzales, appointed by President George W. Bush as U.S. Attorney General and Tony Garza now serving as Ambassador to Mexico.

When the Republicans became the majority in the Texas Legislature in 1869, they established a system of free public schools to educate all the children of the state something Democrats had refused to do.

In 1998, Republican Governor George W. Bush created the Office of Border Initiatives, which facilitates trade and investment opportunities for Texas communities and companies along the border.

In 1999, Republican Lt. Governor Rick Perry established the first ever standing Committee on Border Affairs to address needs along the Texas Mexico border.

In 2001, Anglo Democrat men comprised only 20% of all Texas House members, but were named to 36% of all chairmanships by the Anglo Democrat Speaker. Hispanics were shortchanged because their support was taken for granted by the Democrat elite.

In 2003 however, Hispanics received approximately a 5% increase in chairmanships by the Republican Speaker of the House.

As of October 2004, Governor Perry has appointed over 300 Hispanics to different state commissions.

Under the administration of Republican Governor Rick Perry, state agencies have invested more resources in the 32-county border region than under Democrat leaders at any time in history.

Equal opportunity is a right and privilege. Texans should be able to start a business, run for office or chase a dream without the threat that government will punish success. Hispanic Republicans are successful leaders in their communities and in Texas politics. The Republican Party of Texas is the political party that can best help all citizens achieve their hopes and dreams.

The Congressional Race in District 28

But now here we are in 2006 y la politica en Tejas sigue siendo one of the top 10 spectator sports in the state. With less than 20 days to go until the March 7th primary election many still believe this three man race will result in a run-off election.

While Henry
Cuellar has the advantage of incumbency on his side, the recent photos and cartoon by the San Antonio Express
News of him being embraced by President
George W. Bush has raised the profile of the 28th Congressional Race around the county.

Critics of Cuellar have used the President's embrace to point out how the Republicans really feel about him. This, coupled with the endorsement from the conservative group called the Club for Growth has caused a flood of campaign contributions into the Ciro Rodriguez war chest.

According to recent reports, Rodriguez has collected more than $85,000 dollars from online donors in the last few weeks. At the end of 2005, Henry Cuellar had almost $300,000 in cash for his war chest compared to $40,000 for Rodriguez.

With contributions and endorsements continuing to come in for both candidates, Victor Morales remains the wild card in this race.

Currently on leave from his job as a school teacher, Victor has been speaking to people door to door and relying on a vast network of out and now I am not a cred ible candidate when I want to run for congress?"

Good Eleving REPUBLICAN PARTY:

friends and supporters that he has built up over the years. And still refusing to take political action committee money, Morales is adamant about being his own man and a voice of the people. While the Republican Party has tried repeatedly over the years to get Victor to switch to their party, he stills says no and insists on doing things his way.

At a recent debate organized by the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, Morales was told he was not a viable candidate and therefore could not participate in the event. A week later at a debate organized by Channel 8 KGNS (NBC) in Laredo, Morales was allowed to participate and the issue of whether he was viable or not was never raised. Morales says, "How is it that I was able to get over 2 million votes when I ran for the United States Senate the first time out and now I am not a credible candidate when I want to run for congress?"

The Morales Factor

Say what you want about Victor Manuel Morales but one thing that may be a source of worry for Henry Cuellar and Ciro Rodriguez is the public's memory of the guy in the little white pick up truck who kept asking, ¿YPor Qué No? And Why Not a School Teacher?

The table below shows the votes Morales got in 1996 when he ran for the U.S. Senate and what he got when he ran again six years later in 2002. Both times he ran with very little money but the people remembered him. (Be aware that only part of three counties are in the 28th Congressional District this time.)

What will happen on March 7th, 2006? Stand by for a surprise.

La Politica by the Numbers

In the 2006 Primary Election scheduled for March 7th, 2006, a total of 1,128 candidates filed with their respective state parties in Texas.

For the Republicans, there are a total of 534 candidates. For the Democrats, there are 410 candidates and for the Libertarian Party. there are 184 candidates. Those can-running as independents were not counted.

As Table # 1 shows, the Republicans fielded the largest slate with 534 candidates or 47% of the total. (534/1128) These figures do not include candidates who are running for offices at the county level.

In Table # 2 the candidates for elective office in the coming primary are shown in terms of gender. Both the Republican and Democratic parties fielded a slate of candidates that is about 25% female. The Libertarian Party of Texas came up with 16 female candidates or 8.6%.

Statewide, a total of 249 of the 1128 candidates in this year's primary election (33%) are female.

Table # 3 shows the candidates by party affiliation and ethnicity. A total of 151 Latinos are represented in this election cycle's offering. Upon closer examination it can be seen that the largest number of Latino candidates (116) have filed to run as Democrats. Stated differently. 13.3% of the candidates in didates who stated they are | the 2006 primaries in Texas

Texan to lead Iowa Latino division

By DANA BOONE REGISTER STAFF WRITER

A Texan has been chosen to lead the lowa Division of Latino Affairs. Armando Villarreal, 58, a Latino advocate and private consultant from San Antonio was appointed Wednesday by Gov. Tom Vilsack. Villarreal will begin as the state division's administrator Dec. 14. His salary will be $52.000.

"We are pleased to announce the appointment of Armando Villarreal," Vilsack said. "He will be a strong advocate for diversity and education in a variety of areas because he understands our responsibility to continue to strengthen economic security for all lowans."

Villarreal had worked as a private consultant and Latino advocate with a variety of groups including the AFL-CIO in Texas. He also worked on Latino voting rights issues in Texas. Central America and South Africa. Villarreal replaces John Paul Chaisson-Cardenas.

ALVARADO for LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR for the people of TEXAS TO NE TEXAS FOR ALL

Maria Luisa Alvarado Heads the Top of the Democratic Ticket in Texas

María Luisa is a native Texan born and raised in San Antonio. She is one of four daughters and eight sons born to Francisco and Bonifacia Alvarado.

Her family's history of public service includes her father who served in the US Army during WWII during which time he was a POW and released. All eight of her brothers served in the military, of which four served concurrently in Vietnam.

One vounger sister served in the Texas Air National Guard. (In 2005, her youngest brother served in Ubezkistan in support of the current US war efforts in Iraq.)

After graduating from Memorial High School in May 1974, María Luisa awaited her date of entry into the US Air Force to begin a six-year enlistment of active duty. On November 10, 1980, Maria Luisa completed her 6-year enlistment and soon after returned to San Antonio to attend college and serve in the Texas Air National Guard.

In May 1988, she earned a bachelor's degree sociology from The University of Texas at San Antonio and then accepted a position with the National Veterans Outreach Program, a veteran's service organization of the American G.I. Forum.

María Luisa believes that all tax payers have a right to expect that their government work effectively and efficiently to serve all its citizens equally and fairly.

"This campaign is about identifying the issues that really matter to Texans. Conversations with ordinary citizens suggest the issues are many and vary, but most agree that the most urgent issues must first be resolved.

María Luisa Alvarado

In 2005, I opposed all proposed constitutional amendments on the November 8th ballot on principle. Those propositions did not pertain to our most urgent needs. Texans deserved more for their patience over several years. Our state leaders have had ample time to resolve the more urgent needs of Texas schoolchildren taxpayers. I will work towards shifting the focus of government back to the people it is obligated to serve."

A Champion For Austin Families

"As a professional firefighter for 13 years, I know what it means to protect and serve Austin families. Now, I want to take that experience to City Hall, and continue my service in an even more meaningful way."

"If elected, I will fight every day to protect 'the basics' of our quality of life: good jobs and benefits; safe and stable neighborhoods; clean air and water; and great schools. I ask for your vote for Austin City Council."
